The role of Entrepreneurial Universities in interfacing Competitive Advantages: The Case of Beira Interior region (Portugal)

João Ferreira*, João Leão, and Mário Raposo

University of Beira Interior, Portugal

*Corresponding Author: Department of Management and Economics, Faculty of Sciences, 6200-109 Coimbra, Portugal. E-mail: joao.ferreira@fcs.unb.pt

We call to host the abstract of the 10th National Conference of the Institute for Social Studies in Entrepreneurship (INCE) "Growing Entrepreneurship" - National Social Region, 2016. For more comments and suggestions, or in any other case.

This paper reveals the importance of a local entrepreneurial university in interfacing competitive advantages, by assessing the condition of most efficient and dynamic engine of regional development. The strategic diagnosis provides the identification of a dominant quadrant in the TOUS matrix application to the Beira Interior region, which is dominated by Neo-Her strategies. For improving the competitive positioning of that region, the transition from the dominant quadrant (Neo-Her) to the most desirable quadrant (Neo-Max) is also proposed. In this sense, the University assumes a fundamental role in the design and in the promotion of the proposed set of strategic actions, which should be implemented in two critical areas: traditional activities and tourism; and entrepreneurship and innovation. In terms of future research, the same analytical tool could be applied to other regions with a similar competitive profile, in order to obtain comparative analyses and to better calibrate the TOUS Matrix.
